

ANAS DAGHESTANI, MD

Anas Daghestani, M.D., is an Internal Medicine Physician and Chief Executive Officer and President of Austin Regional Clinic (ARC), founded in 1980. ARC is a 400 physician and APC multi-specialty medical group that serves the greater Austin metropolitan area with 35 clinical locations. ARC provides care to approximately 625,000 Central Texans in fourteen cities and four counties. Dr. Daghestani is President of the ARC Executive Board. He is also President and Chief Executive Officer of Covenant Management Systems (CMS), an Austin-based organization that delivers a full spectrum of medical group management and billing services to multi-specialty medical groups.

In addition, Dr. Daghestani serves as Chief Medical Officer for the Seton Health Alliance, an Accountable Care Organization (ACO), in partnership with the Seton Healthcare Family and also serves as Medical Director of ARC's Population Health & Clinical Quality.

Dr. Daghestani joined ARC in 2005, and practices at ARC Far West. He received his medical degree from Damascus University, Damascus, Syria, and completed his internship and residency at the University of Illinois St. Francis Hospital, Evanston, IL. He received additional training at the University of Kentucky in Lexington, KY and is board certified in Internal Medicine.